The answer offered in the most widely-circulated tract, "Free negroes are in a worse condition than the slave," was not the correct answer. Free negroes were not much different from slaves in respect of condition and status. Indeed, for many free negroes and slaves alike, the immediate goal was not freedom but rather the improving of their social condition, the recognition and acceptance of their humanity. The fundamental problem with the slave/free divide is that it alienates the white race from its own history and the facts. The other answers — including Lincoln's — were: "Free negroes are inferior in strength, stamina, intellect, and morality; are subject to the most brutal usage, as they can neither defend nor retaliate; and are esteemed by white men as they are, as mere property." Or, as Washington Irving said, "The ... are two species of the same genus." Free negroes were certainly subject to abuse. That was a fact, and slaveholders routinely invoked it as an excuse for continuing to hold them in bondage. But the fact is that the conditions of the slaves themselves had become even worse since the Civil War. The plantation

I'm currently trying to get the CORS for a simple subdomain working properly. I have the following.htaccess file on the root of my Craft 2.x install: AddDefaultCharset UTF-8 SetEnvIf Origin "." CORS=1 SetEnvIf Access-Control-Request-Method "" CORS=1 SetEnvIf Access-Control-Request-Headers "" CORS=1 SetEnvIf Accept-Encoding "gzip" CORS=1 SetEnvIf Accept-Encoding "deflate" CORS=1 SetEnvIf Accept-Encoding "" CORS=1 I can also confirm that the proper headers are being returned by my front end code (Chrome dev console). However, when the proper CORS headers are set, and the server is serving up my site at I still get an error in my browser console: 0cc13bf012
